Prince Henry Visits Naval Academy.

And Takes A Horseback Ride With The President.

They Start For His Western And Southwestern Trip.

Washington, Feb. 28.—A driving rain did not deter Prince Henry from going to Annapolis today to visit the United States Naval Academy. At nine o'clock, when the prince came to the door of the German embassy, the air was white with mist and rain. Some of the prince's party tried to dissuade him from making the trip, but like a true sailor he paid no heed to the elements. The usual cavalry escort was dispensed with today, and only the detail of mounted police officers and a bicycle squad accompanied the party. The guard of honor continued on duty, however, their guns and great coats dripping with the deluge. Prince Henry was accompanied by Adjutant Von Elsendecker, but as this was purely a naval trip the German ambassador and the civilian members of the embassy staff did not accompany the party. Prince Henry wore the dress uniform of admiral of the German navy, with a heavy naval cape thrown over his shoulders and the naval service cap. With him in the carriage rode General Corbin and Captain Cowles, naval aide to President Roosevelt. In the following carriage were General Sanger, assistant secretary of war, and Adjutant Von Elsendecker. This party was joined at the depot by a number of the naval and military officers of the prince's suite and of the German embassy. In the party were Secretary Long, Senator Hale of Maine, chairman of the senate committee on naval affairs; Representative Foss of Illinois, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs; Assistant Secretary of State Pearce, Admirals Bowles, Endicott, Kenney, O'Neill and Bradford, Commander Cowles, Captains Sigbee and Lemly, General Hayward of the marine corps and Chief Wilkie of the secret service. Admiral Evans did not accompany the party owing to a lame knee. The rain was falling in torrents as the train pulled out. The doings at Annapolis, no matter how rapidly they are shoved along, will take up the greater part of the day, when the time consumed on the railroad is taken into account. Then there is the farewell visit to the president and a dinner at the German embassy. After that a lot of German societies are going to sing for his highness at the embassy, and a speech is expected in response. At midnight the special train starts that is to take Prince Henry on his long southern, western and eastern journey. It is expected that the tired visitors will get a good rest in at least the first end of this trip. Assistant Secretary Hill said that the schedule had been made with that end in view. The speed will be slow, and between here and Chattanooga only three stops will be made involving the appearance of the prince. These are at Pittsburgh, twenty minutes; at Columbus, twenty minutes, and at Cincinnati, ten minutes. Prince Henry said on arriving here that he never before had slept so well on a railroad train, and members of his suite have said that, even the train on which the German emperor travels is not so comfortable by a good deal, so far as accommodations for the suite are concerned.

JUDGE BRALEY'S DECISION.

Temporary Restraining Order Will Continue In Force.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 28.—Judge Braley of the superior court rendered his decision this afternoon upon the petition of the R. S. Brine Transportation company for an injunction restraining Local Drivers' International Union, No. 25, its officers, and Oscar F. Cox, president of the International Allied Trades and Transportation Council, from interfering in any manner with its business. Several weeks ago Judge Braley rendered a temporary injunction and his decision today continues in force the restraining order against the local union, but dissolves it so far as Mr. Cox is concerned.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 28.—Not in many years have the southeastern Gulf states experienced so much damage by a storm as that caused by the one which yesterday visited Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida. So far as known seven lives have been lost and several persons injured. The damage is enormous, the railroads being particularly heavy sufferers.

SEVERELY CENSURED.

Washington, Feb. 28.—Senators Mc Laurin and Tillman of South Carolina were severely censured by the United States senate for the sensational personal encounter between them on the floor of the senate last Saturday during the consideration of the Philippine tariff bill. The adoption of the resolution of censure probably closes the incident so far as Mr. McLaurin is concerned.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 28.—At 9:30 to-night the river reached the danger point, and is rising very fast. Local Forecaster Ridgeway sent out warnings to all river men and people along the river, to prepare for twenty-five feet by morning and probably that thirty feet will be reached.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

The Movement Continues to Grow Over the World.

The twenty-first anniversary of the organization of the Christian Endeavor society took place a short time ago and was observed in very many places. The precise date was Feb. 2. From a small beginning this movement has spread all over the world and there are now 62,000 societies, representing more than forty denominations under its banner.

The enthusiasm which inspired and has carried this great modern crusade along sprang from one man, Rev. Dr. F. E. Clark, who convened the first meeting of young folk ever called together for the purpose and formed the first society on Feb. 2, 1881, in the Williston church, Portland, Me. Rev. Mr. Clark was then pastor of this church and he at once commenced training a large number of converts for church membership.

There are now half a million members of the society scattered over the globe.

From its initiation the movement, with its appropriate motto, "For Christ and the Church" has had the utmost sympathy and co-operation of prominent ministers and missionaries. Among these may be mentioned Dr. Burrell, Rev. A. DeWitt Mason and Dr. Wyckoff. The latter recently addressed a gigantic and enthusiastic convention of the Indian branches at Bombay.

Dr. Clarke was not present at the recent convention he having sailed for Europe on the 4th of January in order to bring the work of the society before the churches of the various European countries the work hitherto having been mainly confined to English speaking countries.

Dr. Clarke will attend the British national convention to be held in Manchester, England, and Secretary Baer is now making a six months' tour of the Pacific coast.

The record of the society's work is such as to warrant one in calling it one of the pillars of the modern Christian church. Its remarkable success is due to the fact that the work of the society is non-sectarian. Originating with the Reformed church, it has now taken root in over forty different denominations. Leaving the vexed question of creed to others the young people constituting the Christian Endeavor have in local society meetings and large conventions exalted the living Christ and put all their energy into serving him. It has put money and effort behind faith, and its benevolent contributions have amounted to many million dollars. Undoubtedly it is the most live and potential force in connection with church work today. The channels into which this excellent work has drifted are so multifarious that it is well nigh impossible to enumerate them. From the humble Williston parsonage the light has gone out to all sorts and conditions of men. Much good work is being done among the soldiers and sailors. One of the most successful institutions for these men in Nagasaki, Japan. It is the only public place in the city where a man in uniform can obtain accommodations that are disconnected with a barroom or place of uncanny reputation. American soldiers on their way to the Philippines have been liberal patrons of it. The cost of the home is almost provided for from the receipts of the soda water fountain.

In many of the leading state prisons of the county branches are now established. These have been beneficial in promoting exemplary conditions among the inmates. The largest single company of "Comrades of the Quiet Hour" is in the Kentucky state prison.

ANOTHER SNOW SLIDE.

Pelluride, Col., Feb. 28.—Another snow slide occurred on Butler mountain this afternoon burying about forty men who were engaged in rescuing the men buried by the first snow slide. Nine bodies have been recovered. It is believed that the loss of life in the first slide will not exceed thirty.

RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS

Conclusion Of Hearing On Electric Road Petition.

Matter To Be Considered And Reported To The Court.

Boston & Maine Road Puts In Evidence Against The Petitioners.

The electric road hearing before the railroad commissioners has been continued in Dover and the commissioners will consider the matter and report their findings to the superior court. The Boston & Maine road put in considerable testimony against the petitioners.

Lawyer Kivel stated that the territory between this city and Dover was the territory of the Boston & Maine road and that the road stood ready to give the public all the service that they need; they say that their business both summer and winter are ample to accommodate the public; we don't think that there is any need of a road over the proposed road.

W. T. Perkins testified—Am superintendent of the eastern division of the Boston & Maine road; the capital stock of the P. & D. railroad is $760,000, carry about 100,000 passengers a year over P. & D. road; never had any complaint from the public in regard to train service; have made arrangements with Mr. Lovell for special train service from Dover to Hampton beach; have made arrangements with him for carrying passengers for him on the western division of the Boston & Maine railroad; we are perfectly willing to put on extra trains if they were needed; we always do as the railroad commissioners advise us to do, whatever they took away from Dover, Somersworth and Rochester would deprive us of that business our experience has been that wherever the electric road has hit us they have taken much business away from us; the electric road would be a competitor, I think it would draw business from the western division of the Boston & Maine railroad and the P. & D. railroad; the fare to Portsmouth from this city is twenty-eight cents, twenty-two cents on a mileage; if we only ran the electric road we have charge of in winter it would not pay; it don't seem to me that the electric road could be made to pay its expenses only seven months in the year; our best month on the P. & D. railroad was last July when we carried 10,000 passengers.

Cross examined by Judge Emery—The electric road would effect our travel from Dover to Portsmouth; I think that people will ride on the electric when given a chance, the travel is much heavier in summer time than in winter; don't call to mind that we have made any effort to create travel to the beach; have not thought seriously of equipping the P. & D. railroad with electricity until recently; there is no question but the road will be equipped in time; my idea is that the public don't demand the road with all the conveniences that the B. & M. is giving the public; I was not called upon to oppose Gov. Hill's road to York Beach.

In answer to Lawyer Frink—Don't know how many people would come from Greenland to Dover; have a station there that will take people to Dover here. The P. D. directors have voted to equip the road with electricity; there are two stations in Newington on the P. & D. railroad. This closed the evidence in the case.

Mr. Frink said in part that he was not anxious to discuss the question and I don't know as you want to hear me; I don't think that I can aid you in this case; this petition has been sent

THE ATTEMPT UNSUCCESSFUL.

Washington, Feb. 28.—An unsuccessful attempt was made today in the house committee on naval affairs to secure the introduction of the question of reporting a resolution to tender the thanks of congress to Rear Admiral Schley.

THE ATTEMPT UNSUCCESSFUL.

Washington, Feb. 28.—An unsuccessful attempt was made today in the house committee on naval affairs to secure the introduction of the question of reporting a resolution to tender the thanks of congress to Rear Admiral Schley.

to you by the court to determine whether the public good demanded it or not, as I understand that it is the policy of this board not to grant a permission to construct a road where capital has been expended to run a road over a certain territory where there is already a road with a large amount of capital invested; we are running a road for the benefit of the public as best as we can and as we understand it you are not supposed to authorize a charter for the building of another road to run in opposition to the Portsmouth & Dover railroad. He said that the road would be in conflict and work an injury to the Boston & Maine road and he believed that the commissioners should deny the charter for the proposed electric railway.

Judge Emery spoke in favor of the petition for the charter of the P. & D. street railway. He said that in part there were two questions. First, Does the public good demand the railroad. Second, Does the railroad work injury to another corporation. He said the proposed road was a benefit to the people along the line and would also be a convenience to the people of Hampton, Exeter, Newington and to the people of this city. He said the proposed road would create its own traffic and there was no reason why they should not be allowed to connect the link between the road in this city and the B. & M. & A. railway and in doing this it would create the travel that will go to maintain the road. He said that it was a shame for the people to come here and talk against men who were willing to come in here and benefit to the state and the people at large.

Mr. Langdon said that this road would cause a great injury to Mr. Woodbury Langdon who had invested many thousand dollars for the benefit of the place which he had fitted up for his seclusion.

This closed the hearing and the commissioners will consider the matter and report their findings to the supreme court.

TORPEDO BOATS DEFENDED.

Admiral Melville Praises the Fleet Under Construction.

Although Rear Admiral George W. Melville, chief of the bureau of steam engineering, does not believe torpedo boats absolutely essential to the navy, he has nothing but praise for the character of such craft and building for the United States navy. In reference to the reported inefficiency of a large number of our torpedo boats now under construction he says that they are well if not better designed than any similar class of torpedo boats. No change will be made in their original design, he says, and they will be put through their trial tests under the usual conditions prescribed by the department.

Admiral Melville takes exception to the report that the torpedo boat fleet now building is structurally weak, faulty in design, and through alleged over-weighting, too heavy in displacement. He insists that their engines are made as nearly perfect as they can be made, and that the boats instead of being failures are fine specimens of naval architecture. "We have," he says, "the best destroyers and torpedo boats today built by any government, ton for ton in displacement and knot for knot in speed, and the heavier they are built in proportion to their displacement the better they will be."—Washington Star.

Let us hope that Miss Stone will stay released.

The prince is a good talker as well as a good sailor.

The guinea's stamp has not made Henry less "the gowd."

Miss Stone has not yet reported whether she converted the brigands.

Meantime, Venezuela is enjoying a respite from that little German dun.

And yet the prince hasn't seen a tunnel, or a fire, or a first-class explosion.

It was in accordance with the eternal fitness of things that the Meteor should start from Shooter Island.

Since the launching of the emperor's yacht two little hatchets will be associated with future February memories.

The republican party is still young, only about forty-seven years old, but she's the grandest on earth and is able to jerk the lint out of anything that bumps up against her.

Are the trusts crowding out individual enterprise in this country? One of the leading commercial agencies produces the figures to show that 172,000 more concerns, large and small, are doing business than were enumerated ten years ago.

The news of the capture of the desperate bandit and wholesale robber Lukan by American soldiers in Samar appropriately comes on the same day with the announcement that a further reduction of 13,000 men is to be made in the American force in the Philippines. The situation has been greatly simplified by the strenuous pacification of Batangas by Gen. Bell and of Samar by Gen. Smith. The average Filipino appreciates the measures in the direction of peace taken by those two energetic commanders. There is no reason why 32,000 American soldiers should not soon be sufficient to keep the peace in the islands. And as the soldiers come home, the school teachers go out. A transport load of them recently left for Manila. Having learned the lesson of American determination, the people there find themselves ready for instruction in American liberty.

Relief to Cuba ought not to be granted in a grudging spirit, or in a way to put our government in the position of demanding more than it gives in a hard bargain with a suffering dependent. Perhaps a twenty per cent. reduction on the sugar and tobacco duties is better than nothing, but that is about all that can be said for it. It is not enough and its offer would be very far from generous or considerate. The relief should be liberal, abundant and such as would be sure to afford the expected benefit, and not curmudgeonally and of doubtful effect. While this is demanded by something higher than commercial advantage, there is no doubt that this would be quite as great for us as for the Cubans, so far as dollars go, though we do not need it and they do. The incidental injury to special interests, apprehended by those engaged in them, would prove, we are sure, almost entirely imaginary. The ways and means committee did not yield enough to the sentiment of the country and its recommendation should be improved upon.

A WORTHY COMMEMORATION.

It properly exalts the dead president as a citizen, a patriot and a public servant, and also as a politician—as a sound party man. Never losing the grace which is his by the double right of the diplomat and the man of letters. Mr. Hay seizes the significance of McKinley's relation to public affairs with perfect boldness. He shows that McKinley did well to be a republican, not alone because he could not be anything else, but because it was his highest duty to himself and the country, in the times in which he lived, to be a good party man. Mr. Hay shows how utter would have been the unwisdom, for McKinley, of assuming an attitude of hostility to congress, and how thoroughly well he served the country by making his influence with the legislative body secure.

Mr. Hay's sincerity and frankness in treating of his branch of his great subject will serve as a rebuke to the hypocrisy of the assumption that a man (cannot be a patriot and a statesman of the highest type at the same time that he is a good politician. But the secretary of state is not done with hypocrites and hyper-critics when he has said this. His revelation of the deep and earnest anguish with which McKinley contemplated the coming of the Spanish war will, or ought to, bring a blush of shame to the cheeks of those who have been impugning the honesty of the dead president motives in the troubled days of April, 1898. If ever a man was sincere, McKinley was sincere in doing what he could to prevent that inevitable clash.

Tributes to McKinley will not end with this fine address of Secretary Hay's. The definite eulogy of such a man can never be spoken. The literature will be full of his praises; and detachment like that which has lately been uttered will simply react in further and nobler encomiums.

What's the secret of happy, vigorous health? Simply keeping the bowels and kidneys strong and active. Burdock Blood Bitters does it.

TOLL GATE INN BOOKED AT LAST FOR PORTSMOUTH.

For some time past Manager Hartford has been endeavoring to arrange a date with T. J. G. for the charming colonial play, which has been meeting with big success this season. At first the terms were too high, but knowing the attraction to be a strong one he finally consented to the figure asked by the management of the company. When that was settled the question of the date arose and it was not until yesterday that it was finally decided upon by telegraph, and the

LOBSTER HATCHERS.

They Should Look Out for Short Law and Save Trouble.

Capt. Collins of the Fish and Game commission says that if anybody is going to start in raising lobsters the experimenter will do well to get permission from the commission first.

Dr. Meade of Brown University, says that it has been proved by experiments under his direction, that lobsters can be propagated from lobster eggs within artificial enclosures or a tree. Several people along the north shore have started in making preparations to raise lobsters on a wholesale scale at Rockport, Newburyport and elsewhere. The law says that any person caught with short lobsters in his possession shall be fined.

It was suggested to Capt. Collins that the law could not fairly apply to such cases as these. But he would not admit the fact. "If they want to be on the safe side," he said, "they had better come in and consult with us first. Otherwise they are in danger of arrest. The law is there on the statute books, and it reads very plainly."—Boston Advertiser.

GRAFFORT CLUB.

Rev. Henry Hovey of Newburyport, Mass., gave before the Graffort club on Thursday a delightful lecture on the "Mazes and Marvels of Mammoth Cave." Wit and wisdom most pleasantly mingled characterized an address which included many new and striking statements on such fascinating subjects as caverns, sinkholes, subterranean views, bottomless pits, stalactites and stalagmites and many other curious topics. The uniform temperature of the cave which summer and winter alike stands at fifty four degrees Fahrenheit, was one of the interesting facts mentioned.

Mr. Hovey also told of the unusual sweetness and purity of the atmosphere in this immense cavern, the quality of which is so refreshing and invigorating, that in contrast to it even the fine air of the Kentucky mountains at its mouth, seems dust and odor laden.

Because of this, a number of stone cottages were built in the cave for the use of consumption patients in the hope that there would be found there a great natural sanatorium. The hope proved vain, however, for in the absence of the sunlight the poor consumptive pined away and died and the deserted cottages stand there still, monuments of blasted expectations.

At the close of the lecture were heard many expressions of pleasure and appreciation, with the desire that Mr. Hovey should appear before the club another season.

A fine duet on the piano by Miss Whidden and Miss Simpson closed the program for the afternoon.

ACT QUICKLY.

Delay Has Been Dangerous in Portsmouth.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in times of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Cure all distressing, dangerous kidney ills.

Plenty of evidence to prove this: Mr. A. A. Shea, of No. 2 Langdon street, says: "I had kidney trouble occasionally for two years or more. Whenever I contracted a cold or did any lifting bad spells came on me. I did not have much backache. It was the kidney secretions that distressed and annoyed me. While in pretty bad shape I was induced by testimony appearing in the papers to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial, and I went to Philbrick's pharmacy in the Franklin block and procured a box. After I stopped them I felt no inconvenience from urinary difficulty. The lameness had gone with it. I consider this a good recommendation for Doan's Kidney Pills."

CUTLER'S SEA VIEW,

Frederick's Double Scoop

By FRANCIS G. DARLING
Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

Paul Frederick stood in front of a Park row cafe usually denominated the Second Press club. He was smoking a huge cigar that with the cocktail he had just purchased within had consumed his entire capital. The fact that he was absolutely without funds did not detract from his appreciation of the aroma of the Havana. The situation lacked the charm of novelty. Frederick was too independent to submit to the petty rules governing the office. This was his third "vacation" in four months. Now, with his money all gone, he looked down the street at The Globe office and wondered whether Carson, the city editor, was ready to take him back.

As he looked two men came out of the entrance to The Globe. One ran round the corner in the direction of the Press club. The other started up the street also on the run. When the latter saw Frederick, he stopped abruptly. Then he came forward slowly, Paul taking no apparent notice of his approach. He ranged alongside with an evident effort to appear unconcerned. "Hello, Paul!" he cried. "Have a drink?"

Frederick looked up with an air of surprise wholly at variance with the interest with which he had regarded the approach. "Why, hello, Harrigan!" he cried cordially. "No, thanks. I don't want a drink; just had one." He blew a cloud of smoke in Harrigan's direction and mentally congratulated himself that he had been able to afford a good one.

Freddy Harrigan sniffed appreciatively, and his face fell. "Say," he remarked casually, "if you don't want a drink I can give you a tip. You go see Carson quick, and I think he'll take you on. He needs a man, and I'm glad I saw you."

Frederick grinned cheerfully. "I believe you are glad you saw me, Freddy," he said patronizingly; "also I appreciate the value of your tip. You run back to the office. Tell Carson you found me smoking a perfecto. I'll be here in front of Oscar's for the next twenty minutes. Now, scoot!"

"Oh, I say," retorted Harrigan, "you needn't be so independent. Here, out of the goodness of my heart, I offer you a drink and give you a tip. Then you turn round and call me a messenger boy."

Frederick patted him on the back. "You're a good copy reader, Freddy, but you're too poor a liar to make a good reporter. You and Johnson came out of the door with much haste. Johnny sneaks around to the Press club. You start up here, but break to a walk when you see me. You make a casual play. You've got the price of two balls and want to blow it. If you've got a quarter this late in the week, Carson gave it to you for a bait. If he staked you, he wants me, and wants me bad. Now, run on and don't forget to tell him I'm still smoking up."

Harrigan went briskly back to the office. Frederick went on smoking, concentrating his gaze upon the crowd idling in the June sunshine and watching the tunnel workmen in City Hall park.

The smoke served as a barometer to Carson, who came up the street. Frederick could smoke anything from citty to the best of Cuban leaf. Between the two lay a hundred shades of financial expression. When he smoked a pipe, he was tractable. The better the cigar the less amenable was he to discipline.

Carson clapped him on the back. Frederick turned. "Hello, Carson!" he exclaimed. "So you did want me, eh?"

Carson stamped impatiently. "Don't waste time fencing. I need you or I would not have come after you. Do you suppose I can chase the row every time I want a new man? How much money have you?"

"Enough to buy smokes with. What more can I want?"

"The St. Paul leaves in forty minutes. Get on board. J. H. Philbrick, the head of the new copper trust, is on the ship. It is supposed he wants to get English capital. If you can get the story, Fenton, our London man will meet you at Southampton. Have the story ready for cabling. You do that, and I'll see you get your job back. Now, run for it. Pay your fare, and Fenton will make good."

"Haven't got the fare; only expenses," said Frederick.

Carson looked blank.

"Sneak it!" he said, brightening. "Use my card and tell the purser I will make it all right with the steamer people."

"All right. Send it by Fenton, so I can square up before I leave the steamer. They might hold me in pawn, you know."

Carson laughed. "All right, but for heaven's sake get away. You'll miss the steamer."

Frederick's whistle woke a sleepy cabman under the city hall trees. As he came across the car tracks Paul turned to his companion. "Got any small change for the cab?" he asked.

"All I have is one fifty dollar bill."

Carson thrust a small wad of bills at him and bundled Paul into the vehicle. "American line pier double quick, Goodby, Frederick."

Within the cab Frederick smoothed out the bills. There was $70. Two for the cab left a capital of $68 for the trip

A CAUSE OF HEADACHE.

One Very Common Cause, Generally Overlooked.

Headache is a symptom, an indication of disarrangement or disease in some organ, and the cause of the headache is difficult to locate because so many diseases have headache as a prominent symptom; derangement of the stomach and liver, heart trouble, kidney disease, lung trouble, eye strain or ill fitting glasses, all produce headaches, and if we could always locate the organ which is at fault, the cure of obstinate headaches would be a much simpler matter.

However, for that form of headache called frontal headache, pain back of the eyes and in the forehead, the cause is now known to be catarrh of the head and throat; when the headache is located in back of head and neck it is often caused from catarrh of the stomach or liver.

At any rate catarrh is the most common cause of such headaches and the cure of the catarrh causes a prompt disappearance of the headaches.

There is at present no treatment for catarrh so convenient and effective as Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, a new internal remedy in tablet form, composed of antiseptics like eucalyptol, guaiacol and blood root which act upon the blood and cause the elimination of the catarrhal poison from the system through the natural channels.

Miss Cora Ainsley, a prominent school teacher in one of our normal schools, speaks of her experience with catarrhal headaches and eulogizes Stuart's Catarrh Tablets as a cure for them. She says: "I suffered daily from severe frontal headaches and pain in and back of the eyes, at times so intensely as to incapacitate me in my daily duties. I had suffered from catarrh, more or less for years, but never thought it was the cause of my headaches, but finally came convinced that such was the case because the headaches were always worse whenever I had a cold or fresh attack of catarrh."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets were highly recommended to me as a safe and pleasant catarrh cure, and after using a few fifty-cent boxes which I procured from my druggists I was surprised and delighted to find that both the catarrh and headaches had gone for good."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are sold by druggists at fifty cents per package, under the guarantee of the proprietors that they contain absolutely no cocaine (found in so many catarrh cures), no opium (so common in cheap cough cures), nor any harmful drug. They contain simply the wholesome antiseptics necessary to destroy and drive from the system the germs of catarrhal disease.

BETWEEN HEATS.

Anaconda, 2:01½, may change owners before the bell rings for him to start in 1902.

The report that York Boy, 2:09½, is to "go down the big ring" this year is being circulated.

The Memphis Trotting association will hold a nine days' meeting this year, the dates being Oct. 21 to 30.

It is not improbable that O. W. Williams may make Allerton, 2:09½, a private stallion before many more seasons.

It is now announced that the present owner of Shadow Chimes, 2:06¾, is John J. Scannell, also owner of his stable companion, The Abbot, 2:03¾. The yearling colt by Allerton, 2:00½, out of Palo Alto Belle, 2:22½, by Electioneer—Beautiful Bella, is said to be as fine as his breed.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

We Say War Was a Blessing. The principal guest at the celebration of Lincoln's birthday by the Lincoln club of Grand Rapids, Mich., Wu Ting Fang, said:

"I am inclined to think that the civil war, coming as it did, was not altogether a bad thing for this country. Measured by the wealth destroyed by fire and sword and the quantity of blood spilled on the battlefield the war was an appalling calamity. But measured by the glorious results achieved, chief among which was the settlement of the slavery question, it was not an unmixed evil. Before the war slavery had been an incubus, weighing heavily upon the life and energy of the nation. It had divided the country into hostile factions. The question of slavery had to be settled before the country could enter upon the road of prosperity and peace."

Doesn't Deal With Probabilities.

Judge Advocate General Lemly is neither the prophet nor the son of a prophet, but his prominence in the Schley case has made him a target for all sorts of questions regarding the future as well as the past. He draws his line sharply between the two.

A day or two ago a visitor dropped in to inquire as to the outcome of the Meade court martial. "Meade was acquitted," answered the judge advocate general promptly, without looking up from his work.

"How about the charges which were filed by Meade against Lauchheimer?" asked the visitor.

"That question you will have to propound to the weather bureau."

"But the weather bureau is not involved in this matter. I don't understand you."

"It deals with probabilities. I never deal with probabilities."—Cor. Pittsburgh Dispatch.

An Amateur Tragedian.

Many little anecdotes are told of Charles S. Boyd, whom Governor Odell appointed to succeed Colonel Partridge as commissioner of public works. Mr. Boyd is an exceedingly popular clubman, very tall and of somewhat massive build, with a voice which at times can be made to resound through a large hall.

When Mr. Boyd is among his intimates, he is often asked to recite, and his favorite selection is the speech of Richelieu beginning, "Mark where she stands; around her form I draw the awful circle of our most holy church." Very few tragedians, Mr. Boyd's friends assert, attained the impressiveness of his delivery in this selection, and at club reunions, when he is present, the evening is not considered complete without the recitation.

She's a Peeress Now.

By the death of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, which occurred at Clonaboye, County Down, Ireland, on Feb. 12, an American girl, formerly Flora Davis of New York, becomes a peeress of the realm.

The gradual rise in rank of this New York girl is certainly a remarkable one. When she was married to Lord Dufferin

MARCHIONESS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA. In's second son, she became Lady Blackwood. Then the oldest son of the marquis died in Africa, and she became Lady Clonaboye, countess of Ava. Now the head of the house is dead, and she becomes the marchioness.

Balfour Repulses Reporter.

A newspaper man who desired to interview the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour was, by a servant's error, shown into Mr. Balfour's study while another visitor was with him. With a foolish want of tact the reporter tried to induce the leader of the house of commons to talk while this third person was still in the room.

"Will you," replied Mr. Balfour to a query of the newspaper man in his sweetest, gentlest manner, "be so kind as to go outside the door and close it?"

DRESS SUITS IN GRAY.

Radical Departure in Evening Wear Promised Next Summer.

The America of the twentieth century has original ideas concerning the future of men's dress for evening wear. The coming summer is to see a striking innovation, according to the New York Times, which may lead to others still more radical. This is nothing more or less than the substitution of dark gray cassimere for the black material of the same texture which has been used exclusively hitherto in the making of men's suits for evening wear.

The leading New York makers of men's clothes have had this matter under consideration for some months, believing that the time was almost ripe and considering that the utility of a suit of some sober, dignified color other than black would appeal to the common sense of summer residents at the fashionable resorts particularly.

In discussing the proposed change a prominent Fifth avenue tailor said recently:

"Of course we do not expect every one will change from black to gray at once. We have had several orders for dinner suits in the new style, but many of our best customers in renewing their Tuxedo garments for the coming season have preferred to stick to the black of seasons past."

"It is probable that the gray suits will first be seen early in the Newport season, and we shall then be in a better position to judge whether the wearing of them is to be regarded as a fad or whether the innovation may be expected to become a permanent change in fashionable evening dress and steadily grow in popularity."

"The lines of the gray Tuxedo will follow those of the black for the present season, which remain unchanged from last year. The silk facings will extend clear to the edges, with a little binding of braid to match. The vest may be of gray, double breasted, or it may be of white, with white or gilt buttons, these being matters in which latitude is allowed for individual tastes, while the approval of fashion and correct style is given to each alike."

JEROME FEAZED THE DRIVER

District Attorney of New York Stopped a Truckman's Cruelty.

District Attorney Jerome of New York related with keen enjoyment an experience he had recently with a truck driver whom he saw beating his horse, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The man was perched high up on his seat and was raining blows upon the animal that either could or would not try to budge the wagon.

"Here, get down off of there and let your horse get his breath!" said Mr. Jerome.

"Horse is balky," replied the driver indifferently.

"Well, if you get down on the ground your horse won't have quite so big a weight to start," reasoned Mr. Jerome. The man stopped upon the whip and got down on the ground.

"Now, wait about five minutes, and your horse will pull all right," said Mr. Jerome, turning to continue on his way.

"Hold on!" said the driver. "Aren't you going to wait and see if your theory will work?"

Mr. Jerome laughed, and the man continued, "Say, what would you have done if I hadn't got down off me seat?"

"I'd have called a policeman and had you arrested," replied Mr. Jerome.

"Who are you?" demanded the truck driver, with a sneer.

"I am the district attorney of this county."

"Geel!" ejaculated the other, dropping his whip in the snow. "Are you Jerome?"

"That's my name."

As the district attorney walked off along the street an interested bystander joined him, with a grin.

"Say," he said, "that was a great bluff you chuckled at that fellow."

"What bluff?" asked the district attorney.

"About you being Jerome. Say, he fell to it all right, didn't he?"

And, with an appreciative slap on the back, the stranger sauntered away.

New Postal Cards.

A new one cent postal card is now being printed at the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, and when the first issue of 4,000,000 has been counted and bundled the new card will be placed on sale, says the Philadelphia Press. Its distinctive feature is that the new card contains a vignette of President McKinley in lieu of President Jefferson's portrait.

Bacteria in Dust Storms.

From a gelatin plate exposed one second to a dust storm in the Pretoria valley, South Africa, thousands of colonies of bacteria were developed. It is believed that fevers are spread in this way, and the possible distribution of tropical epidemics is appalling.

"The Cry of the Children."

Life is "growing hard and dreary; every pleasure turns to gall; In our very dreams we're haunted by a net and whizzing ball. And our backs are nearly breaking, and our youthful limbs are sore, For we're playing, playing pingpong, which our parents both adore."

We can recollect our feelings (which of late have had such shocks) When our father read the paper and our mother darned the socks. But you can't respect your father when he's groveling on the floor. Or is glaring at your mother if she doesn't know the score!

Well, we'll try to bear our burden, and we'll never talk of "fads." Nor remark on "modern mothers" or "the latest thing in fads." But we'll never know what peace is till we land upon that shore Where the fathers come from pingpong and the mothers pong no more. —Frank.

HORSERADISH FARMS

Ministry of New Jersey That Supplies Many Markets.

Tract of Seven Fields Within the City Limits of Trenton Make the Place Famous for the Product—Some Particulars.

Trenton is world famous for its horseradish farms from which practically all the states in the union draw their supply. The horseradish district is just within the city's corporate limits in the valley below the Riverview cemetery, states the New York Sun.

There are seven horseradish fields in the tract, ranging in area from eight to fifty acres. The weather figures as a factor in determining the crop, because heavy dews aid the development of the plant. But the river, or rather the rich, coarse sand that flows with it from the head of the tide water, is the regulator of good and bad horseradish crops.

A successful horseradish farm must be situated where inundations occur. The flow of water over the radish bed freshens the roots and gives the ground that richness and sogginess necessary to make it productive of large crops. Twice a year, and sometimes more frequently, the Delaware, as if by instinct, creeps across the land that divides it from the radish fields and keeps them well watered for a few days at a time. Snow, or the water into which it melts, has no effect on the radish fields. The water from snow is too free from foreign substances to make it beneficial. The crop requires the muddy river water, containing manure and other like ingredients.

In the insect world there is only one known enemy of the horseradish, and that is the ant. It deposits eggs on the sprouts and yearly destroys large crops. Innumerable remedies have been applied in an effort to eradicate this pest, but it is still doing business.

Men are employed throughout the setting out season to fight the ants and remove the harmful weeds that grow up among the radish plants. The utmost care is necessary in watching the horseradish.

The preparatory work of raising horseradish begins about March 1. The ground is ploughed and the radish is planted very much as the potato. It grows rapidly and about May 1 a fine broad leaf begins to spread about hip high.

This is called the cedar leaf or winter top and about September it presages the approach of the harvesting season. When the top of this leaf begins to droop and die then vigorous digging begins. The harvest extends through November.

Not all of the crop is taken from the ground in the fall. A considerable quantity is allowed to remain so that the spring trade may not be ignored. The first leaf, or summer top, makes its appearance on the radishes just about the time that the plowing of the ground for the fall crop is started. The summer radishes are taken up in the early spring, and after being shipped away to the buyers their former berths in the ground are soon occupied by plants for the fall sales.

The horseradishes are sold to the dealers by the ton load. A good crop will bring two tons to the acre, the market price for which is $3 a hundred pounds. Some years ago the raisers got $8 a hundred, but competition has had its effect upon the price. The growth of the radish is not so heavy as ten years ago, a circumstance which the raisers cannot explain.

THE STORY OF A ROSE.

Emotions of the Ribbon Clerk Who Gave the Flower to the Young Lady He Most Admired.

The young man with the 40-cent Ascot and the squeaky shoes had given his lady love a rose—a real American Beauty. He had paid cash for it, which is something richer and better-dressed young men seldom do, says the Detroit Free Press.

The young lady dressed in the flannelette waist, and the five-gored skirt, appliqued on the reverses, ruffles inside and outside, was in high glory. She was the daughter of a motorman, catalogued as a brunette, and wore her hair loose, so that the greater part of it hung over her right eye. A creation of red ribbon tied to a celluloid hairpin hid the thin spot near her right ear.

She was evidently an artist, for she handled the young man's pony in a manner designed to call attention to her beauty. First up to her nose, then down to her mouth, then under her chin, at the same time showing her ivory teeth, like two rows of pearls. She brushed them according to the directions on the bottle, once after arising and again after each meal.

The young man watched her with admiring eyes. He envied even the thorns upon the 26-inch stem; he longed to be a petal or a bud. Meanwhile the damsel continued to fondle the blossom. After spending three hours watching her play with the rose he departed with great longings in his heart.

"O, that I were a rose," he said, bitterly, to himself. "To be worn by you, Emma, to be fondled, to be kissed. If I were a rose I'd be content even to be placed in your hair, much as I dislike hair."

Three days later the young man returned. The maiden was busy at the time sitting on a large volume of collected poems.

"I am preening the rose you gave me the other night," she said, sweetly. At that the young man lost all desire to be a rose. Ribbon clerk at $5.25 every Saturday night was good enough for him.

WHEN GAME SEASON OPENED.

How the Residents Were Made to Suffer by the Swarming Locusts After Game.

The dawn of November 1, calm and fair and beautiful, was like many lovely mornings of October. Nature had not marked off any sudden transition from the eighth to the ninth month of the year 1901. The little birds sang cheerily on bush and brier; the squirrels hustled about among the fallen leaves for the toothsome chestnut and the rabbits scampered through rustling dews and sheltering coze in the very fullness of long-eared liberty and legal protection, says the New York Times.

Thus it seemed in the heart of nature, but not thus was it in the heart of man. The writer had just turned over in bed for that hour of sweet sleep which is said to enhance the attractiveness of noble features, when, bang! came a shocking sound directly under his window! What was this? Did he dream? Was it the Fourth of July?

"Hello, out there!" he yelled; "what are you doing, anyway?"

For his chickens were squawking and flying around the back dooryard, and their antics suggested at once a poacher after domestic fowl. From the depths of the garden shrubbery issued this reply:

"To-day is the law out! Der rabbits iss as much mine as yours!"

"Get out, get out!" responded the man who had lost his sleep. "I will not have them shot! You are a trespasser!"

"Com hee-er!" answered the disgruntled sportsman, waving his empty gun in a threatening manner. "Com hee-er!"

"No; I'll not come!" shouted the man in his nightgown. "I'll send a constable!"

After a lively interchange of personal abuse, in both choice and broken English, the intruder left and an attempt was made to catch the interrupted nap.

But, alas, the battle was on! The entire German population of Guttenberg, Union Hill and Jersey City had taken to the field. Men, dogs and guns waxed apace. By nine o'clock the uproar was terrific.

Across the way a widow saw two men, two guns and five dogs chase a rabbit under her barn. She protested and the contingent withdrew.

Five minutes later the awakened sleeper ordered five men and five guns off his lawn. And still they came. Moved to desperation he got hurriedly into his clothes, sought for a pot of black paint and brush and began furiously painting signs which read: "Shooting—Trespassing—Strictly Prohibited."

Some timid soldiers saw the signs and fell back, but a few old veterans had to be routed with violent language.

So the day wore on, until the beleaguered writer found himself unconsciously murmuring: "Would that night or blucher would come!" Then, indeed, appeared the strangest of all. It was the man on horseback!

Over in the near-by pasture lot loomed to the view a fat Teuton on a bay pony—game bag, big boots, short, double-barreled gun and all. Three stout fellows hammered the inoffensive bushes with sticks and four noble hounds yugged their tails and bayed aloud under the deep-voiced commands of their master. The observer looked, saw and fled!

Although the bunnies had shown themselves freely during the month of October on this 1st day of November the historian of the battle counted only one—and that one sought for wisdom and a refuge under the lady's barn. And this goes to show that Brother Rabbit knew something if Mister Man did not!

Young Woman Farmer.

Hon. Lalah Constance Cavendish, the 17-year-old daughter of Lord Chesham, is the owner and manager of a black farm near her father's estate in Buckinghamshire. Here she keeps black cattle, black horses, black sheep, black goats, black dogs, black cat, black rabbit—black everything that is to be seen on a farm! She had black chickens, and used to sell eggs to her mother, Lady Chesham, but one night a marauding fox came along and cleared the hen coop. Of course, in a hunting country it is crime unpardonable to kill a fox, so Miss Cavendish took the opposite course and gave up keeping fowls, for her black farm must not make a monetary loss.

The country people are amused and interested in her hobby, and the standing joke is that Miss Cavendish has everything black except her dairymaids!—Lpdon Mail.

A Deserted Street in Paris.

A queer discovery has been made in Paris in the shape of a street uninhabited and ignored by all. In the course of the work in progress for widening the Rue Vaneau, this roadway—which it would be incorrect to describe as a thoroughfare, considering that the ends were blocked up—was discovered. It had neither paving stones nor pavement, was two meters wide, and an old inscription showed that it was formerly called Rue d'Olivet. It would be useless to seek the name in a directory, for it is certain that until a few days ago no one knew of the existence of the Rue d'Olivet.—Paris Messenger.

REMINISCENCE IMMORTALS.

Paris People Whom the Authors Remembered as Acquaintances Who Are Named by French Readers.

Supposing a second Richelieu, recognizing the achievements of the modern women were, to found another French academy, reserved not this time for men, but for feminine members only, who would be the 40 "immortal" ladies who could occupy its armchairs? A general vote on this question has just been taken among the readers of a French review, each of whom was requested to send in a list of 40 names of living women. The lady "immortals" thus elected include five royal personages—one empress and four queens—16 authoresses, eight actresses, and singers, five artists, four women eminent for their philanthropic works, and two composers, reports the London Telegraph.

A sovereign lady in her own right, Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, heads the entire list with 5,212 votes, whereas the first of the authoresses, Mme. Adam, has only secured 4,150. The four other royalties are the carina, Queen Margherita, of Italy; Queen Maria Christina, of Spain, and the queen of Roumania, who is, of course, a writer as well as a queen. Among the authoresses, Mme. Alphonse Daudet, with 3,433 votes, and Countess de Martel ("Gyp"), with 3,040, run Mme. Adam close. The remaining eight include Mme. Rosemonde Rostand, who wrote verse before she married Edmond Rostand; Mme. Severine, the disciple of Jules Verne, and Mme. Lucie Faure, the daughter of the late president of the republic. Among the artists are Mme. Madeline Lemaitre and Mme. Louise Albama. The actresses who would sit in the ladies' academy are, of course, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt and Mme. Rejane. Bartet, Marie Laurent, Emma Calve, Adeline Patti, Miss Ellen Terry, and Signora Eleonora Duse. The last three ladies, with Mme. Augusta Holmes, who would represent music in the academy, by the side of Mme. Chambrade and Baroness von Suttner, are the only foreigners on the list of the 40. Apparently the readers of the review in question are not very well up in contemporary English and American literature.

Joe Didn't Spare the Tree.

Explained to the Judge Why He Cut Down the Only Shade-Producer in Devil's Dip.

A tall, thin youth from Devil's Dip walked languidly from the waiting-room when the name of Joe Dormann was called.

"Joe," been cutting down a shade tree," stated the arresting officer. "He cut down the only tree in the Dip and was cording it up for stove wood when we caught him."

"You are sparsely built, Joe," said the recorder to the prisoner, "and woodman, spare that tree" should have been a sacred old poem to you. Maybe you read it: "Woodman, spare that tree." You Devil Dippers are the first people to hunt the shade in summer, and when the cold weather comes you go to cutting down the trees. I am surprised that the officer says there was only one shade tree in the Dip, for I have always looked upon the Dip as a very shady place. What have you got to say about your shady conduct?"

"I've been listenin' to all de perlice an' dis cote hab been sayin'," replied Joe, "an' I takes 'membrance dat no body hain't yet said nuttin' erbout whut kind ob tree dat yus. Jedgo Dingles. Hit was just er ole half-dead tree dat all dem niggers in de Dip has been er frowin' jack-knives inter an' er usin' fer ter hide in frum de perlice. I was ferred dat some time er nuder hit mit fall down an' kill somebody. De trabul was dat I forgiets ter ax de perlice ter lemme cut de tree down."

"But you didn't forget to ax the tree all right, Joe," replied Recorder Broyles. "Because you destroyed the hiding place of the Dippers who escape from the police, I will make your fine only $10.75."

"Yer's sho got er mighty big only," said the prisoner, sadly, according to the Atlanta Constitution.

"I can make it more," said the recorder.

"Now, sah, don't do dat," exclaimed Joe, quickly. "Ise satterfied, Jedgo Dingles."

The "Petticoat Insurrection."

Perhaps the first "woman's rights" movement in America was connected with the early history of the settlement of Louisiana, for there early in the century occurred the famous "petticoat insurrection." The French girls who had come to settle in the country, under allurement, which proved deceptive were particularly indignant at being fed upon corn. Bienville thus reports the matter in one of his dispatches: "The males in the colony, beguiled through habit, to be reconciled to corn as an article of nourishment, but the females, who are mostly Parisians, have for this kind of food a dogged aversion, which has not yet been subdued. Hence, they inveigh bitterly against his grace, the bishop of Quebec, who, they say, has enticed them away from home under the pretext of sending them to enjoy the milk and honey of the land, of prairie."—Pearson's Magazine.

NEW WAYS ON THE BOWERY.

The Once Wicked Street Has Become a Legitimate Business Thoroughfare.

Although the Bowery still possesses the glamour of wickedness for the sailor on shore leave, the soldier on a vacation, or the visitor from the country, New Yorkers are beginning to realize that the famous old thoroughfare, immortalized in song and story, has become a staid and legitimate business street, states the New York Sun.

Barring an occasional dime museum, a few cheap concert halls at the lower end, and two or three saloons, the Bowery has been given over almost entirely to business men. The Bowery stores are busy ones, too, and many of them handle goods of the best quality.

The merchants of the Bowery are organized into an association and they are very jealous of their reputation as business men. The day when the Bowery shops was a place to cheat or rob the unwary has passed.

It is interesting to note also that New York's Chinatown, at the lower end of the Bowery, has become quite a commercial center. A score or more Chinamen have opened shops along Pell street, and their principal customers are people from the upper part of the city, many of whom drop in while out seeing the sights.

For these, the shrewd Chinamen have in stock great quantities of odd Chinese toys and trinkets. Just at present there is a big sale for the wood pulp flowers, which are packed into little disks, and when dropped into water open up at once into very pretty creations. These flowers are well made and one wonders how a box of 15 or 20 of them can be sold for five cents.

MEANING OF SCOTCH NAMES.

Odd and Interesting Nomenclature of the Counties in the Land of Heather.

The whole of the Scotch counties, with but few exceptions, have a meaning to their nouns, many of which were given by our Celtic forefathers, says the Scottish American. Thus Lanark means "a level spot, an inclosure for cows." Dumbarton means "fort or hill of the Britons," and Dumfries, the "fort of the Frisians," or a "piece of copse and shrubs." Ayr takes its name from the river Ayr, meaning "smooth river." Forfar, signifies "cold land," probably because of the cold east winds prevalent there. Kinross is the "head or end of the wood," Wigtown, the "village in the bay," and Roxburgh the "castle on the rock."

Kingardine means "head of the arm or inlet," and Ross a promontory, or isthmus (referring to the Tarbat peninsula). Elie, is called after Elph, one of the seven sons of Bruthin, legendary father of the Picts. Caithness "strangers' land" (so designated from the Danes and other invaders having in turn come and taken possession of it).

Linlithgow means "dear, broad lake" (probably referring to the loch at Linlithgow palace, where Mary Queen of Scots was born).

Peebles means a "tent," and its neighbor, Selkirk, means a "church among the dwellings of hunters' huts." Argyll, of course, indicates the "district of the Gaels."

Marginal Effect of Clashes.

Ajax defying the lightning is not in it with the woman who knows her gown, and he is so perfect it may be safely criticized by her dearest enemy in any light and from any point of view. A sense of superiority and well-being make her love the whole world, and she is amiable and sweet even to the people she dislikes most cordially. While for those she likes she is a companion, no adjective can adequately qualify.—London Country Monthly.

A Progressive Rajah.

His highness the rajah of Cochin is really wonderfully progressive. The official Gazette of the Cochin State gives notice that the documents bearing the rajah's sign manual, such as sanction of legislative enactments, sanction of expenditure, leases of state lands, etc., which have heretofore been written on palm leaves, will henceforth be written on handmade paper.—Madras Mail.

Troubles of the Rich.

Mrs. Cobwigger—"I suppose you find your social duties much more onerous since you became so rich?" Mrs. Parvenne—"Yes, indeed, my dear. I have had to cultivate an entirely new set of acquaintances."—Judge.

Another facial contortion has been added to the list that has been growing ever since the bicycle face appeared a few years ago when the craze for the wheel became general. The wheeled face was easily recognized by the set expression, the strained eye, and often the sadly drawn-up mouth became distinguishing characteristics of the faces of bicyclists, both men and women.

Since then the coupon thumb and the tieker eye have appeared in Wall street, and golf has had its shin and its arm. Of late it has been asserted by physicians and artists that the eye of the golf enthusiast may be recognized by its fixed, steady gaze, similar to that observable in the eye of the yachtsman, says the New York Sun.

The golf eye, of course, comes from the strain of following the ball's course through the air, just as the sailor's eye becomes fixed from looking over the sea for great distances. Sometimes the forehead wrinkles habitually with both the golfer and the yachtsman.

THE AUTOMOBILE FACE.

Marked When the Features of Some of the Most Famous Men of the World Are Compared.

The most highly developed of machines, tools, the automobile screw machine, and like many another contrivance for saving labor, its home is New England. It is a development of the ordinary steel-working lathe, the intermediate step being the monitor lathe, in which the various cutting tools protrude from the side of a steel turret like a 15-inch gun from a battleship turret. In the non-automatic screw machine, the turret is revolved by the operator, so as to bring each tool into play, just as the turret on the old "Monitor" was revolved to bring one gun after another into action. But in the automatic machine, the work is done without human guidance, says Frank Hix Fayant, in Success.

In making screws, nuts, bolts, studs, and other small pieces that must be turned, drilled or threaded for watches, clocks, typewriters, electrical instruments and other mechanisms, all the operator has to do is to feed the "stock"—a long, thin rod of steel or brass—to the machine. The feeding mechanism carries the rod slowly forward into the field of action. The turret advances, and puts its first tool to work on the end of the rod. When this tool has done its task, the turret draws it, turns and advances a second tool into action. Each cutting tool around the turret has its distinct work to perform—one cutting a thread, another shaping a head, another putting on a point, another drilling a hole, still another putting on knurling. The turret automatically brings each of, perhaps, six tools into action, and when the work is finished, the completed screw drops into a pan while the "stock" is automatically fed forward to begin the complex operation again. A stream of machine oil pours continuously on the work to carry away the heat, and the little metal cuttings collect in a heap under the machine.

Hour after hour this wonderful automation goes through its cycle of operations, the turret clicking every moment as it brings a new tool forward. Small pieces of brass, on which but one tool cuts, are dropped at the rate of four a second. Large screws of complicated design, upon which a whole turretful of tools must work, are cut from a steel rod at the rate of one or two a minute. So perfectly are these screw machines constructed that an unskilled mechanic can operate a row of them. All he is required to do is to keep them fed with "stock." In some shop girls tend the machines.

AN INDIAN GIRL EDITOR.

Young Cherokee Woman Who Publishes a Magazine Devoted to Red Men's Interests.

Miss Margaret Eddleman, a young Cherokee woman, is the editor and publisher of the Twin Territories, a 32-page magazine, filled with matter calculated to interest people living in Oklahoma and Indian territory. The magazine was started three years ago by Miss Eddleman, with the help of her elder sister. The latter married some time since, and the entire work now devolves upon Miss Eddleman, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Among her contributors are various Indian chiefs of the five civilized tribes. None of these contributors accept any money for their work, as they are rich, but they have to be handled with great diplomacy.

Previous to the establishment of Twin Territories, Miss Eddleman worked with her father as a reporter upon the Muskogee Evening Times. This gave her her first taste for literary work, and she improved it.

The fame of the Twin Territories and its Indian publisher has spread. Not long ago a magazine publisher in London sought an article upon Miss Eddleman and her literary work.

Although she never speaks of her ancestry, not, as she explains, that she is ashamed of being a redskin, she has a "head right" among the Cherokees, and owns a good farm and participates in their regular distribution of tribal funds. Indeed, it was from her tribal income that she secured enough money to launch her enterprise.

Miss Eddleman is not yet 20 years old. Her form is slender and graceful, and she is considered one of the social lights and beauties of the five tribes, where the beauty of the woman is far famed. Editorial writing is not the gift of Miss Eddleman, for under the pen name of Migno Shreiber she has published several articles in magazines. "Only an Indian Girl," "Lionel, the Creek Girl," "dignity," "Lionel, the Creek Girl," and "A Pair of Moccasins" are some of her stories, which have won attention and praise from leading critics.

British Naval Discipline.

A curious story of English naval discipline has just found its way into print. When the Ophir, with the duke and duchess of Cornwall on board, was nearing St. Helena the signal was made to the attendant cruisers St. George and Juno, as it was desirable to reach port before nightfall. "Can you steam another knot?" and the Juno replied: "Yes, four if you please." This answer was regarded as impertinent, and when the vessels reached Portsmouth, as a mild form of punishment the Juno was ordered to lie up in the harbor, while the more respectful St. George came alongside the dockyard. And the Juno, at last accounted, is lying at her moorings still.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Reported to Police as Having Disappeared Sept. 10.

On the morning of that date Morris left the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Moran on Woodbury avenue, to go to an alarm of fire at the Flynn farm, on the Greenland road. Since that time his daughters have not heard from him, and they fear that he has either met with some accident or been the victim of foul play.

Morris is about fifty years old, and previous to coming to this city lived in Biddeford.

All people in the "first part" are requested to be at the club house for a rehearsal at 9:30 this evening.

INCREASE IN SALARY.

Commencing March 1 Pay Will Be $600.

Rural free delivery carriers in the United States mail service are to have an increase in pay. They have been looking for it, hoping for it, longing for it ever since the first few months of the establishment of the service. Now, at last, it is to come and it is hoped by the carriers that this raise is but the entering wedge.

Postmaster Battlett received word from Washington yesterday that on and after March 1 the pay of all rural carriers previous to that time receiving $500 per annum would be $600, while those receiving less would have an increase of twenty per cent.

The poor pay of rural free delivery carriers has been notoriously small. Many of the best men who have entered the service, both in Manchester and elsewhere, have left the service after an experience of more or less brevity because they could not make a living at it. It costs something to keep a horse and most carriers find that to cover their twenty to twenty-five miles of route daily in all sorts of weather requires two horses so that they may change off, and two horses and wagon repairs cost a bigger portion of $500 per year than one would imagine without trying the experiment of living out of what is left.

It has been a standing joke that Uncle Sam paid his rural carriers $300 a year for their horses and $200 for themselves.

It has been supposed that the meagreness of their pay was due to the fact that until within a year the service has been looked upon as more of an experiment than anything else. Now having proved its worth and become a fixture, it is thought that the rural carriers will be put on more of an equality with the city carriers.

It is not necessary to say that the news of the increase was received in Portsmouth with pleasure by the local carriers. Two of those who had been connected with this branch of the service have just left and others were contemplating taking such a step. They will stay now in the hope that better things are to come.

WANTED WARRANTS.

John McPherson Gently Turned Down by the County Solicitor.

John McPherson of Auburn arrived in town Friday from Manchester where he introduced himself and said that he had come to make complaint against nine alleged liquor dealers doing business in that town.

He informed the county solicitor that he himself, for the past seven years up to several months, had been bartender for his brother, William McPherson, at Auburn; that he and his wife had become bound by a bond to purchase from ex-Senator Timothy Howard, of Manchester, the old "Dance Guilbert" place, and had paid a small part of the purchase down.

He at first informed the solicitor that his only object in wishing to make this complaint was that the selling, by the alleged liquor dealers in Auburn disturbed the quiet of his neighborhood. He said he had no personal knowledge that any of the persons at Auburn were doing business, with the exception of his brother, William, against whom he seemed to be particularly bitter. He also informed the solicitor that he and his wife bought the Guilbert place hoping to be able to sell liquors, and that if he had been allowed to sell, the value of his place would have more than doubled; and he also stated that unless he could sell he proposed to see that the other places were shut up.

The solicitor, after listening to his story, informed him that, on his own statement as to his mode of livelihood and motives he was not a person of good character, as required by section 2 of chapter 87, of the laws of 1895; and this, together with the fact that his evidence in all cases complained of, with the exception of one (this brother William's) was hearsay, determined the solicitor to refuse to receive his complaint.

Mr. McPherson was finally informed by the solicitor that if any person of good character should come to him with probable proof of violation of chapter 112 of the Public Statutes, he would issue whatever warrants were necessary.

Mrs. Sullivan attempted to get it from him but was grabbed by Quinn who choked her but Sullivan interfered and put a stop to the row. Quinn was considered guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $5 and costs of $6.90. Quinn appealed and was held under two securities of $100 each for his appearance at the April term of superior court.

On Friday afternoon at three o'clock a short session of police court was held before Judge Adams. McCarthy was considered guilty and ordered to pay a fine of $3 and costs of $6.90.

LOW PRICES.

Many people shout Low Prices. The prices are low—so is the quality of the goods. We say low prices and we lack not the statement with a good strong reason. We can make the best clothing—make it as well as it can be made—at low prices, because our expenses are light and we have many patrons. There is no use throwing money away. There is no use paying any more for perfection than you have to. We will be glad to see you at any time.
